TIMELINE THEATRE

Staff Leadership Message

TimeLine's 15th Anniversary Season was an outstanding year, with four productions that stretched our ability to innovate and ignited passionate discussions with our audiences about how history connects with the social and political issues of today.

It was also a year in which TimeLine received national attention, named “one of the nation’s top 10 most promising emerging professional theatres” by the American Theatre Wing, founder of the Tony Awards®. Chosen for having “articulated a distinctive mission, cultivated an audience, and nurtured a community of artists in ways that strengthen and demonstrate the quality, diversity, and dynamism of American theatre,” we were deeply honored to join the nine other recipients in New York City in October 2011 to receive a $10,000 grant and talk about our collective work. This recognition also came right on the heels of being named “Best Theatre” of 2011 by Chicago magazine.

Both of these achievements are a testament to the amazingly talented artists with whom we work, as well as the passionate members of our Board of Directors, Company and staff who keep pushing TimeLine to new heights.

The 2011-12 season line-up began in new surroundings at Theater Wit as TimeLine expanded its performance schedule into a second venue and added 107 performances to accommodate an ever-growing audience. Lee Blessing’s 1980’s play about two superpower arms negotiators, A Walk in the Woods, was re-imagined with a twist on the traditional casting of two men. Supported by playwright Lee Blessing, TimeLine featured Company Members Janet Ulrich Brooks as the Russian negotiator and David Parkes as the American, bringing a contemporary, intriguing layer of gender politics into an already complex tangle of negotiating techniques, resulting in a fascinating and provocative play about the waning art of conversation and compromise.

Opening less than three weeks after A Walk In The Woods back at our home on Wellington Avenue was the Chicago premiere of The Pitmen Painters by Lee Hall, based on the triumphant true story of a group of English miners in the 1930s who became the unlikely art world sensations. This hilarious, moving and timely look at art, class and politics became an instant audience favorite, extending for two additional weeks. And the Chicago Tribune wrote “[Director] B.J.

Times declared “this show should be mandatory viewing for anyone concerned about the economic, political, moral, social and mental health of this country.”

Continuing to explore the dramatic possibilities of scandal, we concluded our 15th season with a provocative and urgent play about the city of Chicago. My Kind of Town was written by John Conroy who, for two decades, covered the Chicago police torture scandal as a journalist, becoming

Jones’ earnest, moving and unpretentious production will, I suspect, be a very big hit for this savvy and growing company, where more and more Chicagoans have come, with reason, to trust the power, truth and integrity of the work.”

Next we delved into one of the most infamous scandals in financial history with the dynamic new play Enron by Lucy Prebble. Crafted as sprawling tragedy mixed with savage comedy, Enron follows a group of ambitious men and women through the breathtaking rush of greed and fraud that led to the now-legendary financial collapse, and the Chicago Sun- one of the leading voices drawing public attention to the allegations. TimeLine began work with John in 2010 to develop his play into a thoughtful and passionate examination of corruption, responsibility, and the culture of law and order. After two developmental workshops at TimeLine, My Kind of Town received its world premiere, prompting a wave of audience discussion and press attention, including an editorial in the Chicago Sun-Times and national exposure through a rave review in TIME magazine.

plays that will spark conversation, and the ideas and issues on stage in 2011-12 were just a starting point for fostering dialogue with our audience. To continue the conversation, we created a variety of research materials about the historical context and issues of each play, and we continued to find innovative ways to share this information — through our Backstory program book, lobby displays, special panel discussions with leading civic and political leaders, and our always sold out of bringing TimeLine's mission to Chicago Public School students during the 2011-12 season. Living History aims to humanize and personalize historical events and issues by engaging students in acting and writing exercises rooted in TimeLine's mission of exploring history. During the 2011-12 school year we partnered with Alcott High School, Hamilton Elementary School, Schurz High School, Social Justice High School (part of the Little Village Lawndale High School) and Von Steuben

Sunday Scholars Series, held once per production, featuring experts on the play's themes.

Beyond the four productions in our subscription season, we continued our TimePieces play reading series, featuring readings of new or rarely produced historically inspired plays, including The Guys by Anne Nelson, Wasteland by Susan Felder and CQ/CX by Gabe McKinley.

This season also saw the expansion of TimeLine's primary community outreach initiative—the Living History Education Program—which celebrated its sixth year

Metropolitan Science Center. According to the Illinois Interactive Report Card, more than half of the population served by Living History are considered to be low income. Residencies focused on our productions of The Pitmen Painters, Enron and My Kind of Town, and we worked with 500 students on the themes and issues raised in these three plays.

As TimeLine's infrastructure and artistic output continue to expand we also welcomed numerous dynamic artists into our core family as Associate Artists and Company Members. This included six new Associate Artists—Will Allan, William Brown, Aaron Carter, Andrew Carter, John Culbert, Ann Wakefield and Alex Weisman. And we also welcomed Mildred Marie Langford, Mechelle Moe and Maren Robinson as TimeLine's newest Company Members.

Each of them contributes to the short- and long-term artistic programming and growth of the organization, while demonstrating a passionate commitment to TimeLine's mission, vision and values. These artists have contributed in enormous ways to the work on our stage and, equally important, they each have been leaders off stage to make TimeLine a better place to create art. These additions not only further diversify the talents and viewpoints of our organization, they play an important role in defining the next phase of TimeLine's growth and continuing to shape seasons that are diverse, unique and mission-centric.

This is an exciting time for TimeLine. We are expanding our programming, developing more new work, and reaching a broader audience. We have some of Chicago's finest artists leading the charge to bring TimeLine's mission to life and a passionate group of supporters who are helping TimeLine continually raise the bar for the work on stage.

Sincerely,

TIMELINE THEATRE

Board President Message

Thanks to the tremendous support of TimeLine Theatre Company’s donors, subscribers and single-ticket buyers, the 2011-12 season was one in which the organization experienced tremendous growth, serving 3,135 subscribers and marking a 132% increase in subscriptions over the past three seasons.

While thrilling, this milestone of reaching a broader audience also posed some challenges for the organization as we found ourselves already operating at full capacity in our home on Wellington Avenue and in danger of cutting off subscription sales for the third consecutive year.

Working together, TimeLine’s Board of Directors, Company Members and staff determined that the best short-term solution for managing and building upon our organizational growth was to expand outside of our own home and present the first production of our 2011-12 season at a second venue, Theater Wit. This adjustment enabled us to run two shows concurrently and extend the run of each show to add 107 additional performances to the season, opening up more than 10,000 new seats and enabling us to expand our subscriber base without cutting off the ability to also sell individual tickets.

And while there’s no place quite like home, producing at a second venue makes it easier for our audience to be able to experience our work and to introduce TimeLine to others while we explore what our long-term facility needs may be.

As we continually explore ways for TimeLine to broaden its reach and artistic scope, a fundamental value in all of our considerations is not only growing in a responsible and sustainable way, but ensuring that we continue to foster the intimate connection TimeLine has with its audience. Those priorities are at the center of our long-term planning.

TimeLine’s 15th anniversary season marked year one of the organization’s new three-year strategic plan that provides a road map for continued enhancement of TimeLine’s infrastructure and artistic vitality. Our primary goals are to 1) provide a work culture and environment that embodies professionalism and that facilitates doing great work; 2) create unique and insightful artistic works and theatre-going experiences that engage growing, enthusiastic audiences; 3) develop a sustainable growth strategy that supports and advances TimeLine's mission, vision and values; and 4) develop a plan for a new TimeLine Theatre Center that supports long-term organizational needs.

Throughout the 15th anniversary season TimeLine has remained committed to our mission and the strategic and sustainable growth of the organization. With generous supporters who are helping to push TimeLine to new heights, it's an incredibly exciting time for this vibrant company. Through fiscal responsibility and smart management—hallmarks of TimeLine's administration—we have been able to expand, rise to new challenges, achieve new milestones, and continue

Significant Accomplishments

- In all areas of the organization TimeLine continued to grow, meet new challenges and achieve new successes during the 2011-12 season. Significant accomplishments include:
- Completing our 15th consecutive year operating in the black and eliminating a budgeted deficit through better-than-anticipated fundraising and subscription campaigns.
 - Being named “one of the nation’s top 10 most promising emerging professional theatres” by the American Theatre Wing, founder of the Tony Awards®. TimeLine was chosen for having “articulated a distinctive mission, cultivated an audience, and nurtured a community of artists in ways that strengthen and demonstrate the quality, diversity, and dynamism of American theatre.”
 - Being named “Best Theatre” of 2011 by Chicago magazine.
 - Increasing subscriptions 35% over the last season.
 - Seeking to build on our growth in recent years, and recognizing the significant constraints of the audience capacity in our own venue, we presented the first production of our 2011-12 season at Theater Wit. This adjustment enabled us to run two shows concurrently and extend the run of each show to add 107 additional performances to the season.

STEP INTO TIME: 1962

What a night! Nearly 300 guests gathered in the grand ballroom of Chicago's historic Hotel InterContinental to celebrate and raise funds to support TimeLine's mission of exploring history. It was a milestone event as we celebrated 15 years of unimaginable growth with our largest audience of the year and broke company records—raising more than $115,000 in net proceeds.

Each year we invite guests to step into another era at our gala benefit, Step Into Time, to raise funds vital to our ongoing work. On March 16, 2012, we celebrated our 15th Anniversary by stepping back five decades to the year 1962. We chose 1962 not just because it had swank fashion or we love the look of a martini glass in our hands (although it did... and we do!), but because it was a year of wondrous aspiration, hope, and belief in what was yet to come.

Once again TimeLine's family and friends came out to show their support—and what a gorgeous group of supporters they are! Guests came decked out in vintage threads, and between drinks of the era such as a Tom Collins or an Old Fashioned, shopped a silent auction offering one-of-a-kind experiences, artwork by local artists, sports memorabilia, pampering packages and more. Later, after a delicious gourmet dinner, guests bid on more fabulous prizes at the live auction.

The highlight of the evening was undoubtedly the entertainment directed by Associate Artistic Director Nick Bowling, featuring live music and a video highlighting memorable songs, people and events of 1962. And what gala is complete without a flash mob? Shock and delight swept the room as spouses, co-workers, relatives and friends got up to do The Twist, Mashed Potato, Watusi and more!

My Kind of Town puts a human face on the police torture scandal that has plagued Chicago for more than three decades. Veteran investigative journalist John Conroy covered the story, challenging public indifference to become one of the leading voices drawing attention to the charges. My Kind of Town is his passionate, groundbreaking new drama revolving around one imprisoned man’s fight for justice, inspired by the stories of numerous victims, police officers, prosecutors and families whose lives have been poisoned by the allegations. With interlocking storylines that humanize the play’s issues of corruption and responsibility, My Kind of Town sets the stage for a new conversation about today’s culture of law and order.

TIMEPIECES

During the 2011-12 season we continued to present our play reading series, TimePieces, featuring one-night-only readings of new or rarely produced historically inspired plays. TimePieces had three editions this season.

First was The Guys by Anne Nelson on September 11 and 12, 2011, a special two-night presentation of TimePieces at Chicago’s Mercury Theatre to commemorate the 10th Anniversary of September 11. More than 600 people attended, and the readings raised $3,520 to benefit Ignite the Spirit, a non-profit organization founded in 2003 that provides assistance to Chicago’s emergency responders in times of hardship.

“All praise, then, to Chicago’s TimeLine Theatre for resurrecting The Front Page and giving it a staging so full of brassy brio that you’ll wonder why you ever settled for less.” — The Wall Street Journal

The second and third featured readings were Wasteland by Susan Felder on February 7, 2012, and CQ/CX by Gabe McKinley on May 22, 2012. Both Wasteland and CQ/CX were presented to full houses in TimeLine’s 99-seat theatre. Following its reading, Wasteland was slated for production in TimeLine’s 2012-13 season.

INDIVIDUAL GENERAL OPERATING SUPPORT

THE HISTORY MAKERS

We are honored to recognize The History Makers — supporters who make tax-deductible donations of $1,000 and more annually to support TimeLine's general operations. History Makers help TimeLine continue the Chicago tradition of companies that started small, dreamed big and developed into prominent arts organizations. Members of The History Makers Society receive exclusive privileges designed to bring our most generous individual supporters closer to the art they make possible at TimeLine Theatre. This list includes donations and pledges made to TimeLine's Annual Fund and Step Into Time received between July 1, 2011 and June 30, 2012.

OUR VISION

TimeLine’s vision is to be a preeminent Chicago arts organization and nationally recognized leader by creating theater that makes history resonate with today’s society, sparking reflection and dialogue.

The logo for Timeline Theatre Company. The word "Timeline" is in a large, bold, sans-serif font. A stylized, dark grey line, resembling a timeline or a path, is drawn across the letters of "Timeline". Below "Timeline", the words "Theatre Company" are written in a smaller, clean, sans-serif font.
